

Ahfad University for Women

Facts and Figures 2015/2016

History

The history of the Ahfad University for Women reaches back to 1907 when Shiek Babiker Badri established Sudanese first private school. Even more remarkable than its establishment at that time was the fact that school was for girls only! It was most likely the first private school for girls in all Africa.

From then on, Shiek Babiker (1860- 1954) and his son, Yusuf (1912- 1995), expanded private education for both boys and girls, culminating with the establishment of the Ahfad University College for Women by Professor Yusuf in 1966. In 1995, full university status was granted by the Sudan National Council for Higher Education.

Ahfad University for Women (AUW), is a non- governmental, non- private making, non- sectarian university. AUW is governed by three boards: Board of Trustees, University Council and Academic Council.

Vision Statement

AUW will be a nationally prominent university and leading institution worldwide known for gender equity, women empowerment, academic excellence, research, civic engagement and social responsibility

Mission

To provide quality education for women to strengthen their role in national and rural development, and in seeking equity for themselves and other fellow women in all facets of Sudanese society using a combination of well-articulated academic course, on-the-job training , individual research, and community extension activities

Core Values

To achieve our mission, we adhere to the core values of social responsibility, academic freedom, leadership, innovation, excellence, respect, integrity, ownership, commitment, diversity, inclusiveness, partnership, and autonomy.

Philosophy

The goal and philosophy of AUW are to prepare women to assume responsible roles in families' communities, and in the nation using a combination of well-articulated academic course, on-the job training, individual research, and community extension activities. AUW medium of instruction is English.
